Frequently Asked Questions:

1. What are the major brands of hearing aids?
Signia | Phonak | Widex | ReSound | Oticon | Starkey | Rexton
2. What is the standard warranty on hearing aids?
2-years warranty. Some premium hearing aids carry 3-4 years of warranty.
3. What is the average life span of a hearing aid?
Users typically choose to upgrade or move to newer technology between 4-5 years. However, hearing aids can last longer depending on how well you look after them.
4. Where do I get started?
Your first step should be to reach out to a hearing care centre with a qualified Audiologist and book an appointment for a hearing assessment (PTA).

1. INVISIBLE HEARING AID (IIC)

- An IIC hearing aid is the most discreet type of Hearing Aid.
- It fits deeper into the ear canal – though it only fits certain canal sizes.
- It is best suited to those with moderate hearing loss.
- Now available as a ready-to-fit, rechargeable hearing aid

2. COMPLETELY IN THE CANAL (CIC)

- A CIC hearing aid is also discreet and fits into the ear canal.
- It is easy to use for telephonic conversations.
- It is quite effective in blocking out background noise.

3. IN THE CANAL (ITC)

Budget

A. BATTERY OPERATED

- An ITC hearing aid is slightly larger than a CIC hearing aid.
- It has low feedback, like a CIC hearing aid, but can accommodate more features.
- It is suited for mild to severe hearing loss.
- Requires batteries to be replaced from time to time.

B. RECHARGEABLE

- Don't look like hearing aids, more like Apple AirPods.
- No battery changes, no additional running costs.
- 3 hours full charge, gives 15-18 hours of battery life.
- Requires charging, similar to a mobile phone.

4. RECEIVER IN CANAL (RIC)

A. BATTERY OPERATED

Most Common

- An RIC Hearing Aid, is similar to a BTE (Behind The Ear) hearing aid, but with the receiver placed within the ear canal.
- It is lighter and prevents the 'plugged-up feeling' or the occlusion effect.
- It is almost invisible.
- It is suitable for mild to severe hearing losses.
- Requires batteries to be replaced from time to time.
